

Jobseeking Rules

Our objective is for you to find work quickly.

In order to receive unemployment benefit, you must actively look for work and proceed as agreed in the jobseeking plan.

Be prepared to change jobs, to work in different sectors or occupations, and to look for work outside your present commuting area.

The employment office's job is to offer you work or training. If you refuse work or training it may mean that you lose your unemployment benefit.

If you do not immediately find a job, the employment office offers services that will help you find work and improve your competence.
